Good Burlesque .- Mark Twain, in the Galary. gives the following narrative of a "distressing accident," and it must be confessed that it is a very slight burlesque on the style of some local reporters :

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT. Last evening, about six o'clock, as Mr. William Schuryler, an old and respectable citizen of South Park, was leaving his residence to go down town, as has been his usual custom for many years, with the exception of only a short interval in the spring of 1850, during which he was confined to his bed by injuries received in attempting to stop a runaway horse by thoughtlessly placing himself directly in its wake and throwing up his hands and shouting, if he had done so even a single moment sooner, must inevitably have frightened the animal still more instead of checking his was, and rendered more melancholy and distressing by reason of the presence of his wife's mother, who was there and saw the sad occurrence, notwithstanding it is at least likely, though not necessarily so, that she should be reconnoitering in another direction when incidents occur, not being vivacious and on the lookout, as a general thing, but even the reverse, as her own mother is said to have stated, who is no more, but died in the full hope of a glorious resurrection, upwards of three years ago, aged 83, being a Christian woman and without guile, as it were, or property in consequence of the fire of 1849, which destroyed every
